Creative Ways to Develop Flavor in Product Development

Gina Parisi, Director, R&D/Quality Assurance
Custom Seasonings

Flavor is an essential part of any eating experience. It can be subtle or robust - and whichever way it is delivered, flavor can make something unforgettable. During this presentation, we will touch upon different ways to incorporate flavor by using certain preparation procedures, adding seasonings and spice blends, and by cooking methods. We will discuss how these techniques can add distinct dimension to a product and how balancing these practices can deliver optimum flavor.

Gina Parisi is the Director of R&D and Quality Assurance for Custom Seasonings Inc. Prior to becoming director, Gina managed the CPG R&D department for High Liner Foods and was also previously a member of the R&D team at Gorton's Seafood. She is an alumna of Johnson and Wales University, graduating with her bachelor's degree in 2003

Best Practices for Sourcing Ingredients in Developing Markets

Roger T. Lawrence, Corporate Vice President
Global Quality & Regulatory
McCormick & Company, Inc.

McCormick has a long history of sourcing from China, India, Indonesia and other developing markets that are characteristically more challenged for Good Agricultural Practices, Good Manufacturing Practices and adulteration-free products. The subject discussion will be a high-level review of the preventive, chain of custody framework that has evolved over time, focusing on our core spice and herb business.

McCormick & Company has been in the business of sourcing ingredients globally since our founding in 1889. As such, we have unique experience and know-how in sourcing pure, wholesome and safe materials from so many countries around the world.

Roger Lawrence is responsible for Quality Assurance, Food Safety and Regulatory Systems and Programs throughout McCormick's worldwide operations and supply chain. Prior to his current assignment, Mr. Lawrence has held positions as, Director of Product Development and Quality Assurance – Europe, Director of Product Development and Quality Assurance for the International Group, Vice President of Technical Services for the US Consumer Products Division, and Vice President, Operations and Technology for the Asia-Pacific Zone.. Before McCormick, Mr. Lawrence was employed with Quaker Oats Company in quality managerial positions at both plant and corporate headquarters.

Working toward Clean Labeling

Michelle Cannon, Manager, Sales Development
Ingredion

The clean-label trend may be defined as "consumer demand for products free of complicated and chemical-sounding additives, made with short and understandable ingredient lists and minimal processing." (Mathieu Dondain, Director of Marketing and Communication, Nexira, Rouen Cedex France, Food Product Design Summer 2014).

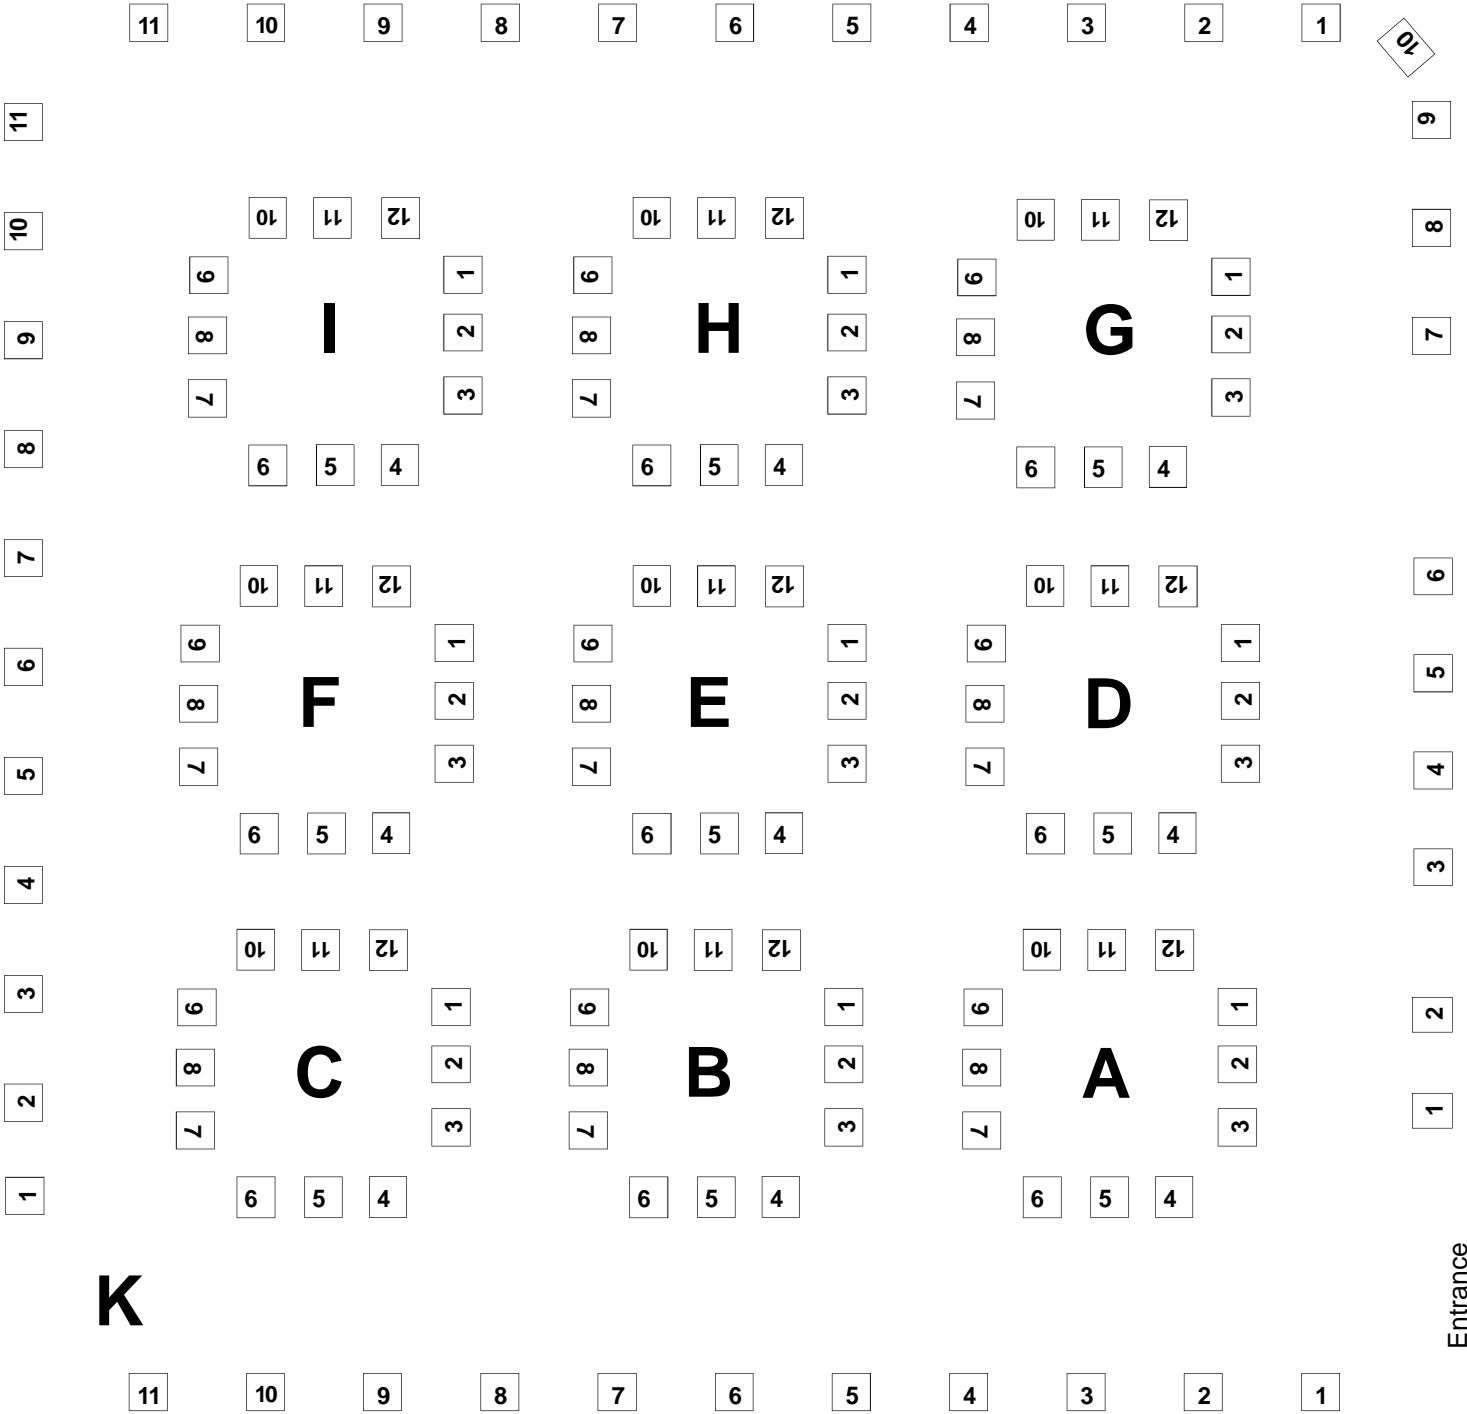

Michelle Cannon has been a Sales Development Manager at Ingredion since April 2016. Prior to that she worked as a consultant to the food and beverage industry for almost 20 years at IFN, and takes a special interest in the regulatory aspects in the product development cycle. Many of her projects have involved review of regulations or a client's ingredient/claim targets prior to (rather than during) the development of a product, which in itself helps narrow down the development space. She attended the Clean Labeling Conference held by Global Food Forums in Oak Brook, Illinois in 2013, and has attended food labeling conferences held by GMA as well as EAS Consulting. Michelle has been happily living in Ithaca for 21 years, and enjoys spending time with her husband and two daughters, playing tennis as much as possible while avoiding injury, cooking and reading,
